Course Introduction

Care Economy and Labour Rights Training Course is designed to strengthen understanding, skills, and advocacy around one of the fastest-growing sectors in the global economy care work. The care economy includes paid and unpaid work such as childcare, eldercare, disability support, domestic work, and community health care. Despite its critical role in sustaining societies and economies, care work remains undervalued, underpaid, and often informally structured. This training equips participants with strong analytical, policy, and practical tools to address inequalities, promote decent work, and advance gender-responsive labour systems. It integrates global labour standards, social protection frameworks, and human rights-based approaches to strengthen decent work in the care sector.

This course also focuses on labour rights protection, gender equality in the workplace, and sustainable workforce development in line with global commitments such as SDGs, ILO conventions, and feminist economic justice frameworks. Participants will explore how unpaid care work disproportionately affects women and marginalized groups, and how policy reforms can transform care systems into inclusive, equitable, and sustainable structures. The training emphasizes advocacy, social dialogue, and policy engagement to ensure fair wages, safe working conditions, and recognition of care workers as essential economic contributors.
